When your application does not demand a brand new unit, Gregory Poole Lift Systems has the perfect solution for you! Our fleet of reconditioned equipment is unparalleled in the industry, with multiple levels of reconditioning tailored to meet your specific application and budget.

The Inspection

Each lift truck goes through an extensive inspection process to determine if it meets Gregory Poole's high standards for reconditioning. This in-depth inspection starts with the unit being steam cleaned and brought up to operating temperatures, at which point our certified technicians inspect all major components, including but not limited to:

- Engine compression check
- Transmission stall test
- Steer axle
- Mast, rollers and chains
- Hydraulic hoses
- Forks measured for wear and compliance with OSHA standards
- Starter and ring gear
- Accessories and safety equipment
- Drive and pump motor (electric units)
- Battery tested/replaced if necessary (electric units)

The Parts

Once the extensive inspection process is complete and the unit is approved for reconditioning, the repair process begins. Gregory Poole uses only quality OEM parts to ensure long-term, reliable operation.

The Repairs

All mechanical work is performed by one of our factory-certified technicians. Our commitment to quality means that you get a certified lift truck that you can depend on.

The Paint Job

Many of our reconditioning levels come with a factory-quality, three-color paint job for a like-new appearance.
